

Possible real motives behind 'moral' interventions

POLICY	COVER STORY	TRUE ATTITUDE	REAL INTENTIONS encourage mass immigration	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - economic efficiency - openness to other cultures 	don't care about efficiency; not specially fond of immigrants	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - import more supporters of interventionism - irritate/oppress the bourgeoisie increase number of university students	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - fairness: more to have opportunities confined to a minority 	no particular wish to let anyone have genuine opportunities	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - stop the clever being able to benefit from their cleverness - destroy intellectual activity - irritate/oppress the bourgeoisie increase percentage of university students from comprehensives	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - efficiency: inclusion of able young people from disadvantaged backgrounds 	dislike able people from poorer backgrounds as much as those from any other, if not more	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - dumb down universities to point where they are indistinguishable from secondary schools - irritate/oppress the bourgeoisie promote female advancement in schools, industry, professions etc.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - remove barriers for able women 	dislike able women just as much as able men, if not more	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - reduce the prevalence of the male point of view, which is too individualistic - irritate/oppress men promote a proletarian image of masculinity	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - sympathy for the working class 	despise the working class	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - irritate/oppress women - irritate/oppress the bourgeoisie democratise the arts	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - allow the working class to feel more 'included' 	despise the working class	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - dumb down the arts, which are too individualistic/elitist - irritate/oppress the bourgeoisie

Fabian Tassano, July 2010

<http://inversions-and-deceptions.blogspot.com/2010/07/more-real-motives-behind-moral.html>